Tentative Regulations Prepared by Special Commissioner Regarding Use of Label.

PROTESTS BY THE DRUGGISTS

The general character and appearance of the inhelicity is left to the manufacture. The substance, manufacture, and place of production shall be consecutously stated. If the package contains more than one substance, and only one substance is designated on the label, it is a misbranding. The label must be mississiment degan or devise. It was announced also that the law will not go into effect in the case where labels are already in limit of the location of the place of manufacture. When no statement of the place of manufacture with the no missiatement as to the location of the place of manufacture when statement of the place of manufacture is made, the article is missiatement as to the location of the place of manufacture when statement of the place of manufacture when statement of the place of manufacture when statement of the place of manufacture is made, the article is missiatement as to the location of the place of manufacture when statement of the place of manufacture is made, the article is missiatement as to the location of the place of manufacture when statement of the statement

Protest by a Druggist.

George L. Douglass, representing the drug trade, protested against the requirement that the place of manufactures aloud he stated on the label in the case of drugs. What the people wanted was simply the name of the manufacturer who could be held responsible for the character of the contents. If the considering the drug was manufactured, he contended, was manufactured, he contended, was manufactured, he contended, was immaterial. He declared that the rule requiring that no article be designated by the principal ingredients alone, when it contained more than one ingredient, was objectionable to the drug trade.

rade. He declared that fire enforcement of the tentative rules would necessitate the accoustruction of nearly all the labels in the drug trade, many of them in use thirty years or more and familiar to the Trade.

The tentative ruling of the commission provided further that no geographical mans should be used on a product when it bore no relation to the place of manufacture of the product.

Warwick G. Hough, representing the jobbing and rectifying interests of the whiskey trade and the National and State Liquor Desiers' Association, argued against any differentiation in the classification of straight and blended whiskeys, when the committee took up the com-
